

Youth Welfare Office - for the welfare of children and adolescents

Mannheim is home to more than 46,000 children and adolescents under the age of 18. Children are the future of our society. The Department of Children, Youth and Family - Youth Welfare Office has the job to promote the development of children and adolescents in Mannheim and to educate them to become a responsible and socially competent person. The Youth Welfare Office supports young people in their individual and social development and helps to avoid or reduce discrimination. It advises and supports parents and other legal guardians with the education, protects children and adolescents against threats to their welfare and contributes to creating positive living conditions for young people and their families and to maintain a child- and family-friendly environment.

The Youth Welfare Office Mannheim provides a variety of offers for parents and children, young adults as well as families. To get to the right person or the desired information, simply click on the corresponding keyword.
